THE GROWING DEMAND FOR NEWS.

We will hereafter publish the Louisville Democrat every day in the week. Hereto fore the Democrat has omitted Monday, and from Tuesday morning to Sunday, inclusive, made our week's issue. The "Democrat," "pure and simple," is sense in the policy, however it may be urged upon the south side of the street, and, we suppose, would prefer to be designated as the Democratic organ, South. The "conservative, constitutional Democratic" organ, is located on the north side of the street, and, therefore, claims special relationship with the Northern Democracy.—[Union Press.

We don't know who the editor of the Press s. He is anonymous; perhaps too modest to be known, or maybe slightly ashamed of his calling. We can readily excuse this blundering, as he is rather green in politics; but we should like to drag him out into the light and be sure ne was not some reformed Secessionist of

There was in the South that year a large secession from the Democratic party in the Southern States. They quit the party because it would not promise to protect slavery in a territory where the people didn't want it.

Most of the friends of the Union Press belonged to the new school that wanted to tear their shirts to pieces over that great Southern constitutional right.

We had the honor of standing almost alone amongst newspapers in the South in cpposition to this secession hobby in this State. The Democracy, the great mass of them, were of the North. They offered, as they always had done, all that was just and proper to the South: but they would not promise to establish South that made that issue seceded from the other in their zeal for the Disunion issue. of the North, and nearly sneered themselves to death at us and the Democracy, who would on the 25th in this city.

follow no strange gods. Now, we want to know if this writer in the Press did not belong to that class of men South who raved and frothed at us as an Abolitionist, because we could not see the great constitutional right of the South? Didn't he vote for J. F. Bell in 1859?

The Northern Democrats agreed with us in 1860, and, indeed, before and since. The Secessionists who went after Breckinridge, and the other wing of Secessionists South who supported Bell, raving about negro in the Territories and denouncing everybody as Abolitionists, are welcome to be Democrats now, if they will leave their political sins behind them. They may have the credit of the name; we don't need it; for the Democracy know that we are of them. Our record is theirs, and against all Secessionists and Abo-

But who is this editor of the Press? Where to see how much progress he has made. We know a good many of his party who, a few years ago, were for slavery everywhere, whether the people wanted it or not, and are shocked now at its existence anywhere, no matter how much people may want it. We want to know how much a man can change in a short time, and how it is done. Let the editor put up his name, so that the rest of mankind can see it. The pioneer organ that is to upset things generally, and lead off in a great reform on a new path that ignores old parties. and is for the "indispensable" and nothing else ought not to hide the name of its editor from the world. be afraid. The Louisville Democrat is no organ of Democrats South. Most who were Democrats once in the South left the party in 1860. They bolted, and the'r opponents, who shouted long and loud as they did, went with them into secession. They must repent of their sins before they enter the Democratic party again. There are plenty to fill their places in this State, who regret they were not always Democrats. They can never be Disunionists. If Disunion takes place, it will be by the conduct of others, in spite of Democrats. If the Union is dissolved by the ill conduct of other parties, the Democrats will go to work to rebuild what erect a monument to Grant at Vicksburg.

We are especially told that Butler's men propose to carry out the piratical cry of "no quarter," and it is made one of the qualities in him to admire that he has initiated such a feeling. Our opin ion of Butler is quite low enough to believe that he is fully capable of such an act, provided there is no danger of the same measure's being meted out to him. The ruthless invader again essays his periodical effort to capture this city—the "hate-ful city," as he styles it. Our people have be-come so accustemed to these marches upon Richmond, and the lesser raids of the enemy, that they are no longer excited by them. The spirit-stirring drum and all the emblems of war create no excitement in our streets. The citizen leaves his home, his office or his shop, in a quiet and orderly manner, as if he were going on a matter of private, and not at all exciting business; and the women of Richexclude business; and the women of Richmond look upon the departing columns of citizen soldiers—their fathers, husbands, brothers, friends—not only resignedly, but cheerfully—proud, indeed, of the gallatity of those upon whom they lean, in repairing to the point of danger to defend their city. A people schooled into a sense of danger and sylvenous are the recolled Pick city. A people schooled into a sense of danger and exigency, as are the people of Richmond, are naturally ready to meet it. But this people are animated by something more than the mere familiarity with the menaces of the enemy. They have a higher education to duty and resolution. This they have shown throughout this war in their readiness to meet sacrifices of all kinds. They have united with their devotion to the cause and their resolution to make any sacrifice for the public defense an active humanity and hospitality that display virtues that will entitle them to some of the brightest pages in the history of their country.

We do not believe the enemy will ever reach the city defenses. If they should, however, they will be defended in a manuer that will de prive the foe of all hope of ever reaching this place, which he regards as the vital point in the Southern rebellion, and which he hates with the deadly hatred of the blood-hound and the wolf. We well know its fate if it ever fills into his hands, and that alone is enough, independent of the high motives which perve the arms of our soldiers to make its denerve the arms of our soldiers, to make its de Buruside will probably land a few miles below Fredericksburg, unite his right with Grant's left, and by a combined movement force Lee out of his strong position on the Rapidan. As soon as Burnside's movement is disclosed Longstreet will probably make his appearance on Grant's right and rear.

From a private source I obtain very encouraging accounts of the army at Dalton. My friend writes that he has some hopes of seeing Lee re-enforced from Johnston's command, although far from being afflicted with the malady of "spoiling for a fight," he would just like to be in one battle where Grant was opposed by General Lee." At the same time there are many reasons why I should dislike to see this army so reduced as to make it pow erless for anything but a retreat. You will know how all—so far as my acquaintance ex-tends—felt and still feel in regard to General Bragg, and, whether those opinions were correct or not, there is nothing more evident than that, since General Johnson assumed command, this army bas undergone a complete metamorphosis. Instead of wanting every-thing, it is now as well supplied in every re-spect as any body of troops which I have ever seen, and I know that the spirit of determined resistance and enthusiasm which exists among our men can be surpassed nowhere. It was the Army of Tennessee, you recollect, which would like to lead an army in a contest where no quarter was to be given or taken. Lieutenant Colonel Ringaland, formerly of Rosecrans' staff, and now of Gen. In addition to the details of the expedition already furnished, he gives some further particulars. They fought their way all the time, being compelled to meet the enemy's cavalry at Beaver Dam. The following are parts of dispatches which failed to get through the lines last night: None of the regular press correspondents or couriers are through yet to-day, but several arrivals bring scraps and detached fragments of news that must be taken for what they may be worth. The latest of these says that on Friday night Hancock made a dash on the re-maining portion of the enemy's lines to secure the eighteen guns which the rebels had aban-doned, but which had been so mounted behind t uge breastworks that under the rebel fire we had not been able to bring them off. Speech of Brutus J. Clay, of Ky.—His Opinions of the Radicals.

Mr. Clay, of Kentucky (Rep.), the Army Appropriation Bill being under consideration, thus spoke of Federal treatment of negroes:
You (radicals) care no more for the negroes than you do for a hog; not a bit more; you have not half the humanity that slaveholders have. Your course in this matter is dictated solely by your own interests. You are governed by dellars and cents.
Sir, as a slaveholder I have been scoffed at here and villified for the last four or five months. I have held my tongue and refrained from answering; but patience is worn out by this continual abuse of slaveholders. I would rather be a slaveholder than one of you who sit here and legalize this robbery and stealing all over the country. That is what I thick about it. I do not profess to belong to Mr. Clay, of Kentucky (Rep.), the Army stealing all over the country. That is what I think about it. I do not profess to belong to the other side of the House (Republican); but I must admit that all my feelings and inelizations disposed me to go with them, because I supposed they were in favor of sustaining and supporting this Government. We have pledged ourselves to the last man and dollar to go with you to accomplish that purpose. I do not intend to be driven from my purpose. I shall remain firm and steadiast, no matter what you may do; but yet while I pledge you the last dollar if necessary, I do not mean that you shall come and rob me of my last dollar now, and turn me out on the cold charities of the world. Camps were broken at noon; and, amidst the wildest enthusiasm of the troops at the prospect of the opening of the apring campaign, the line of march was taken with the object of centering at Catoosa Springs, three miles northeast of Ringgold. On commencing the movement the divisions of the Fourth corps were in this position: On the center, First di-vision, Major General Stanley; on the left, Second division, Major General Newton; on Wood. The Second division, Brigadier General Wood. The Second division moved down the wagon road from Cleveland to Red Clay. The roads were in superb condition, and as the troops moved very light, without their trains, which were sent round by what is known as the "old Alabama road," very few of those stoppages so common and aggregating on a stoppages so common and aggravating on march were experienced. I must not neglect to mention that as we noved down from Red Clay to Catoosa Springs, a portion of General McCook's division of cavalry took the lead and had a few slight skirmishes with the enemy, driving them from our front upon their reserve. Sev-eral of the enemy were killed and wounded. Our loss was one man killed. THURSDAY AND FRIDAY,

May 5th and 6th, the army, or at least the Fourth, Fourteenth and Twenty-third corps, which had arrived at advanced positions, remained in its position of Wednesday, awaiting the arrival of Gep. Hooker's and Gep. McPherson's corps, who marched around to our right, preparatory to a flank movement upon the enemy's left, for the purpose of turning it. General Sherman arrived at the front to-day, and, in company with other general officers, rode along the lines, minutely inspecting the country, and familiarizing himself with the position of his command. This morning, at an early hour, a small force advanced upon the enemy, who, in small force, held Bald Knob, a small hill about a mile south of Catoosa Platform, and drove them from it without the loss of a man on either side. FORWARD, MARCH!

Is the order for to-morrow morning. Everything is packed and in readiness to move at five A. M. All extra baggage is ordered to the rear, and no wagons will accompany the various columns, except what is barely neces-sary to carry rations and forage for headquariers of the corps, divisions and brigades. The fourth and twenty-third corps, the latter under Gen. Schofield, move upon the enemy's right flank to the right of Rocky Face Ridge, the fourteenth corps, in the center, through Tunnel Hill, and I understand General Hooker and McPnerson will move up in the direction of Resacs, on the enemy's left. Our line, thus ormed, will extend a distance of over ten miles, broken only by Rocky Face Ridge, which is of very irregular outline and entirely inaccessible to troops.

SATURDAY, MAY 7.

At five c'clock in the morning the Fourth orps, encamped in the hills about Catoosa rings, moved east, Stanley taking the lead, bilowed by Generals Newton and Wood. Arnorthwest of Rocky Face Ridge, Newton's division halted in line of battle. Stanley, with his invincible division, moved forward about a mile further, on the left of Tunnel Hill, and throwing out a heavy skirmish line, the right of which rested at the base of Tun-nel Hill Ridge, where it joined General Dayis' skirmishers, under Colonel Dan. McCook, whose brigade was on the extreme left of the line of the Fourteenth corps. The left rested on the base of Rocky Face Ridge. It was General Howard's intention to throw Wood's division in on the right center to support Gen. Stanley; but the enemy presented so weak a front that Stanley was able to accomplish all that was expected—the turning of the enemy's left flank by a movement along Tunnel Hill range to the hill immediately in front of the dred strong, comprising artillery and dis-mounted cavalry, could be discerned on the ridge commanding the town. Whitaker's brigade of Stanley's division at once moved forward up the moderate slope of the range occupied by the enemy, and with a single line of skirmishers drove the enemy from the hill, ssisted by the Fifth Indiana battery, Lieuten ant Morrison, one section of which was located on a commanding hill about a mile northwest of the town.

While the Fourth corps was thus engaged, Johnson's and Davis' divisions moved up from Catoosa Platform, on the center, and entered Tunnel Hill. Davis' division moved along the main wagon road running parallel with the railroad and threw his line across the valley. Johnson came up on the right and entered the town by a narrow trail running down from the direction of Nickajack Gap. Barnett's Ill-inois battery, attached to Davis' division, opened their guns upon the enemy's position about nine, and a brisk cannonadirg was kept up for two hours, until the enemy was flusked and took flight. The fire of the enemy's artillery was quite accurate, and the cavalry dis-played remarkable abandon and contempt for our fire, only retiring when compelled to by our fire, only retiring when compelled to by overwhelming numbers.

Immediately on the retirement of the enemy, Stanley threw his column forward along the ridge overlooking the approach to Bozzard Roost, and joined his right to Palmer at the wagon road leading to Dalton. At 1 P. M. a small brigade of rebel infantry approached within a mile of our advance and formed in an open field, but a few well-directed shots from the Fitth Indiana battery soon dispersed them, and they retired, leaving out a small picket force.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon John Morgan commanding infantry brigade, repulsed an at-tack by Colonel Busby's and Colonel Candy's

To-day General Howard rode out to meet General Stanley, and while in conversation, about a mile from the front, received a bullet through his coat.

MONDAY, MAY 9.

At six o'clock Davis' division opened the ball on the right by throwing forward his whole line toward the base of Rocky Face

AMERICAN AFFAIRS IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.—By the Africa we have the intelligence that the Tory party made the case of the Tuscalooss rebel prize (detained at the Cape by orders from the Home Government) the occasion of testing their strength in the House of Commons. The result was a very notable defeat, considering how nearly ballanced parties have been for the last two years. In a House of over 400 members the Government majority was 34. A simultaneous attack was made on Earl Russell in the House of Lords by Lord Derby, in connection with the Laird rams; but there the question was put to the vote.—[N. Y. Times, Bith inst.]

At four o'clock General Howard ordered the divisions of Stanley and Wood forward into the gaps facing the enemy's breastworks and fortifications to the right of Dalton. The movement had the desired effect, compelling the enemy to open his artillery and expose the position of his batteries. From five until after dark a heavy fire was kept up, and when it ceased Stanley was far in advance of Davis' position of the morning and extended his line some distance up the slope of Rocky Face, supported by General Wood's division. With the exception of Davis' division the Fourteenth corps was not engaged.

General Schofield, with his corps, succeeded about one o'clock in getting up and confronting the enemy's fortifications on the lett of Dalton. Brisk firing was heard in the direction of his position, and I learn to-night that he holds, like the center and right wings of the army, every foot gained during the day.

PROGRESS OF THE FLANK MOVEMENT.

NUMBER 260.

PROGRESS OF THE FLANK MOVEMENT. A dispatch was received at noon from Gen. McPherson, who had occupied Snake Gap near McPherson, who had occupied Snake Gap near Resaca, in Chattoogata mountains, with his force, on Sunday night, which was within six miles of Resaca at that time. The General is directly on the enemy's flank and it is very strange that he was permitted to occupy so vital a defile without great opposition. His present position is about thirty miles in the rear of Dalton, and in all propability the enemy, in finding his flunks and rear exposed, will fall back from the gap in front of Dalton, and give McPherson battle, or retreat hastily without offering fight.

STRENGTH OF THE ENEMY'S POSITION. The pushing forward of our column on the center to-day has developed the fact that the enemy is very strongly fortified in the hills and gaps around Dalton.

EXTRAORDINARY STATEMENT.

The United States Government Contracts with Kirby Smith for the Surrender of the Trans-Mississippi Country-Proceedings of Cotton Plunderers Breaking up the Arrangements.

From Missouri Democrat, Administration paper.] Information of a peculiar and grave character, intimately involving the welfare of the country, comes to us from a highly responsi-ble source, and is of such a nature that we should not be justified in withholding it from should not be justified in withholding it from the public. Personally knowing nothing of the facts alleged, we give the statement in the language in which it is made to us, as follows: "A contract for the surrender of the trans-Mississippi country to the United States was made between the Government of the United States and Kirby Smith, commanding the rebel forces west of the Mississippi river, Casey and Butler being the agents of both parties in making the terms of agreement. Casey is from Chicago and Butler was former-Casey is from Chicago and Butler was former-y State Treasurer of Illinois; both are in the confidence of the Administration.

"The information is derived directly from Casey himself. "The terms of the contract were as follows:
"Kirby Smith agreed to retire from the ountry with his army and then disband it; he would destroy no property, but, on the con-trary, surrender all Confederate cotton to the United States Government.

"In order to increase the amount to be thus given up, he was largely engaged in its purchase from private parties, paying for the same double the amount offered by the agents of the rebel Government, and then branding it "C. S. A.," that there might be no difficulties in the way of confiscation and seizure by the United States. "In return, the United States Government greed to guarantee the safe exit from the country to Kirby Smith and his officers, and country to Kirby Smith and his officers, and pay for all cotton surrendered twenty cents per pound in foreign exchange, with which money Smith & Co. were to retire to Europe. The Government also agreed to respect private property and to prevent devastation and plunder by the troops in their march into the "Casey was asked whether private parties might not engage in the business of buying Smith's cotton, and replied that the matter had gone too far with the Government.

"Brigadier General Ellet, commanding the Marine brigade, knew the fact of this arrangement, but it is not certain whether Major General Command of the C eral Banks was aware of it or not.
"It appears that General Banks and Admiral
Porter had colluded in a gigantic cotton spec-ulation and swindle. They have been seizing all the cotton they could lay their hands upon, and if it belonged to private parties they would brand it 'C. S. A,' and then confiscate would brand it 'C. S. A,' and then confiscate it; they were also plundering the country—in both acts grossly violating the terms of the agreement between the United States Government and Kirby Smith.

"Kirby Smith, seeing his hopes of a retirement in ease and wealth thus dashed, and the cotton he had bought with his private means, together with his prospective riches, thus spatched from his grass was driven to made snatched from his grasp, was driven to madness and desperation; instead, therefore, of retiring from the country, he was making as much resistance as lay in his power, and was burning the cotton he would otherwise have gladly delivered to the United States Government. "Maj. Gen, Banks may have been ignorant of the contract aforesaid; but it appears that he had abandoned his duties as commander of an army and neglected the real points of his campaign, for the purpose of lining his nockets with cotton—thus sacrificing the ef-ficiency and safety of his army and the success of the cause to his own personal profit. Had he been successful, he could have defied the anger of the Administration, which his interference with their plans will excite, and have thrown himself upon the populace, who ever judge of a man's actions by the degree of success which attends them, and not by the intentions with which they were entered upon; whereas, his failure will cause, if no more disastrons result, his immediate removal from command and blast his hopes for the Presidency." Another Proclamation from Governor Bramlette-A State Draft.

The Post's Belle Plain correspondent says reinforcements for Grant are going steadily forward. To-day five steamers loaded with troops arrived at this point; among the regiments are the One Hundred and Seventh Pennsylvania. Tenth Vermont artillery and Third New York battery. During the past week fifteen batteries left Washington for the front, and others are moving, fincluding one with 2,500 men from the West.

Steamers loaded with wounded are constantly leaving; probably 10,000 have left since Friday. The Post's Belle Plain correspondent says

From 1 to 3 o'clock this P. M. very beavy firing was heard in the direction of the field, but has not subsided.

We have furnished correspondence from the late battle-field in Virginia, from the Cincinnati papers, and also from the New York World, Herald and Tribune. We add the following from the New York News as a omment on the present position of affairs:

The Great Battles in Virginia-What Gen. Grant has Accomplished, and What Remains to be Done-No Victory Gained Yet-Butler has Accomplished nothing-Dreadful Losses in Meade's Army-Where is Lee?-Where is Beauregard?

WASHINGTON, May 11. For four days we have had no end of excitng rumors and exaggerated reports in rela-ion to the great battles in Virginia. To-day he truth begins to be known, and I am now able to send to you a tolerably connected and clear statement of what has really been ac-complished by our armies, and of what re-mains to be done. It is well for the readers of the News that they have not been delu-ded either by the official bulletins of the Sec-retary of War, or with accounts of supposed viologies such as have appeared in some of retary of war, or with accounts of supposed victories, such as have appeared in some of the other papers. The simple truth is, that we have as yet gained no victory. We are as far from the objective point of the campaign—the capture of Richmond—as we were a week ago. We have suffered a terrible loss in killed and wounded, and we have done little worse then to demonstrate the inverse. little more than to demonstrate the immense advantage which Gen. Lee enjoys in his va-rious defensive positions between the Rapidan and the Pamunky. In regard to the op-perations on and south of the Penissula, un-less my information is strangely at fault, it is-evident that Butler has recomplished nothing; that he has been misled by false information in regard to the locality of the main body of Beauregard's force; that he has not yet me Beauregard; that Beauregard's troops are holding the southern defenses of Richmond, and had reached the neighborhood of Fort Darling long before Butler's advance reached City Point, and, of course, were not inter-cepted by Butler; moreover, that he can accomplish nothing on the right bank of the James river, even if he has 60,000 troops. The more he has, the worse for Gen. Grant, because the latter will need them and cannot get them. In a word, the whole movement on the James river, from the mement that Butler began to land troops, appears to have been so utterly fruitless, that it is difficult to imagine that it can have been made in pursuance of Gen. Grant's orders.

The whole of Gen. Lee's operations, since our army crossed the Rapidan, have been in exact accordance with the programme indi-cated in my letters of April 29th and May 3d. The furious battles of the 5th and 6th instants were fought where Gen. Lee's advantage of nah river, when a lerge steamer, supposed to be a ram, came down from the direction of Savanush, but returned after recomnoitering.

The Fulton reports that when off Charleston ber, on the 14th, a general engagement when the organization of his army intact. hor, on the 14th, a general engagement with the organization of his army intact, was going on between our fleet, under Admiral Dablgren, and the rebel forts and butteries now ascertained to be sixteen thousand men on James and Sullivan's islands. All the monput hors du combat. The Star, you see, says that nearly fiteen thousand of our wounded are at Fredericksburg, lying so thick that cur cavalry patrol could not do its duty with out trampling on them.

The pursuit of the 7th was not vigorous on The pursuit of the 7th was not vigorous on our part. The distance to which the enemy retired, to Spottsylvania, was only eight or ten miles, yet no general engagement was brought on upon that day. The day was ushered in by a furious cannonade on our part, directed towards the ground from which we had been driven the previous afternoon, and which the enemy had occupied in the evening, but by 9 o'clock in the morning it was ascertained that 'clock in the morning it was ascertained that all our shot and ammunition had been thrown away, for there was no enemy there. No won-away, for there was no enemy there. No wonder that "no reply could be provoked" from the rebels. Their artillery had been removed to Spottsylvania early the preceding evening, and all their troops, except the rear guard, had moved off during the night.

No reliable account of the battle at Spottsylvania on the 9th has yet reached here. That it was a desperate and bloody one is certain. The loss of Gen. Sedgwick alone is a heavy calamity on our side. It is most likely that after the engagement Gen. Lee retired to his next defensive line, on the right bank of his next defensive live, on the right bank of the North Auna river. It is believed here, and it is quite probable, that Gen. Grant felt himself too much weakened, and believed his The loss of seven Brigadiers and forty Colonels is admitted, indicating heavy iosses of enlisted men.

The Ross of seven Brigadiers and forty Colonels is admitted, indicating heavy iosses of enlisted men.

He was compelled to bring it into action on the 6th, and it took a prominent part in the ac-tion both of that day and of the 9th. The idea prevails here to some extent that a portion, at least, of Beauregard's troops were with General Lee in all of these bat-tles; that General Meade has encountered the latter in his utmost strength; and that Lee cannot get any further reinforcements from Beauregard. This is entirely erroneous. No portion of Beauregard's troops have been with Lee. To Beauregard and his troops have been assigned the defence of Richmond, as to him was assigned the task of seeing that the city was properly fortified. When that the city was properly fortified. When Beauregard urns up, it will be at the rebel capital; and there will his troops also be found. If they are needed by General Lee on the North Anna river, or on the Pamunky they will reach him there. But nothing has transpired yet to indicate that he does need tuem. The troops that were encountered by Butler near Petersburg were some troops that had recently been in North Carolins. As re-gards any attack that Butler may make upon Fort Darling, or the other forts south of Rich mond, it will be labor in vain, for he can make

NEW YORK, May 17. The Worll's special says it is reported that Beauregard, with a large force, had marched from Weldon and Petersburg, reaching Richmond, on his way to Lee. that he can't help Lee.

The general opinion is that under Gilmore and Smith operations against Fort Darling will be short and successful. A sap was already within 300 yards of the fort.

Bragg commands the defenses of Richmond.
Besuregard is also said to be in Richmond, organizing a reserva army for Lee. Besuregard is also said to be in Richmond, organizing a reserve army for Lec.

The World's correspondent near Chester, Va., on the 14 h, says our infantry are gradually forcing the rebels' first line of breastworks at Fort Darling. The first and second line of defenses had already been carried by assault.

WASHINGTON, May 16. Secessionists have a story effort that Brack ner and Breckinridge have joined Lee, and that a portion of Johnston's army has re-enforced Beauregard at Petersburg. Backner's junction is considered in military circles possible, but not probable.

A gentleman recently from Georgia, whose statement can be relied upon, furnishes the following information relative to the strength of the rebel armice: Lee's arm'y, he says, is greatly under estimated. There were near 300,000 men in the rebel service, and the last conscription has added 75,007 to their armices. The troops of the Mississip pi number 50,000; the force at Charleston is less than 4,000; Lee and Johnston together have 230,000, of which Lee has two-thirds.

Late advices from Alexandria, La., indicate that General A. J. Smith will be compelled to march overland to the Mississippi river, fighting his way out. It was reported that Forrest and Roddy, with 10,000 rebels, were threatening Hunts-ville and Decatur, Ala., last Saturday.

General Smith, in command of the former place, had ordered all the citizens to work on fortification.

vigorous turning movement will complete the evacuation of the rebel lines without a battle. Yesterday morning the rebels suddenly developed in line of battle on our left, coming through the woods and gobbling up several of our pickets and driving back the reserve. Gen. Meade and Gen. Wright, with their staff, were out beyond the front at the time and had an extremely narrow escape from capture. Immediately afterwards Wright threw out a force, under cover of his artillery fire, and retook the position, which was an important one.

The World learns that large re enforcements have gone to Butler, and his force amounts to sixty thousand, divided into three forces—one menacing Petersburg, keeping the rebel troops there, another besieging Fort Darling, and a third, larger than the others, marching on Richmond. Prominent officers predict that the city will be ours by the 18th. Additional reenforcements have been ordered to Sherridan's cavalry, and he is expected to render great assistance to Butler. Sometimes it burst out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and distressed me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with one sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from anything. In fact, he disorder grew worse. At length I was rejoiced to cad in the Gospel Mossenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), for I knew from your reputation that anything you made must be good. I sent to Uncinnati and got it, and used it tillit cured me. I took t. as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottes. New and healthy kin soon began to form under the scab, which after a rhile fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my celims that the disease has gone from my system.
